A Story of the Wreck. On Thursday morning one of the pa sengers on the wrecked "City of Washington," arrived in Rutland, in the person of a little girl of twelve years of age, named Nellie Hudspith, a niece of our townsman Mr. Edward Trevett, who resides on East street. From this little girl we learn something of her interesting experience in connection with the wreck which we give to our readers. Little Nellie sailed from Liverpool on the 24th of June, alone and unprotected save by the kindness of the officers of the steamer and the other passengers in the cabin, where she secured passage, on her way to Rutland. Her parents are both dead. Her father was engaged in Her Majesty's Customs at Liverpool, where little Nellie has always lived. The voyage was made through a blinding fog all the way, little Nellie being Ill from seasickness but two days. When the ship struck, Nellie was reclining on a sofa in her berth and the servants were preparing dinner. The shock threw her on to the In about an hour after the steamer struck, the passengers were transferred to the boats and conveyed to the beach, little Nellie being the first to leave the steamer She, with seven ladies and several gentleman, went to the farm-house of Mr. Hardin while the remainder of the passengers were sent to the house of Mr. Lewis. Nellie staid at Mr. Hardin's from the Saturday until the next Thursday, and during the time was very well treated by the family there. On Thursday she was taken on board the steamer M. A. Starr en route for Halifax, where they arrived the next day. After leaving the steamer Nellie was placed in the care of Mr. Thomas Lewis of New York, who was on board with his two daughters, and was the secretary of the collection fund for the relief of the passengers- In his care little Nellie arrived in New York on Wednesday the 16th inst., oming from Halifax by rail, and at New York was met by her uncle, Mr. Trevett of Rutland, who brought her home with him on Thursday last. She lost nothing by the wrock save a small work, har which was left on board in the hurry of departure Nellie is a bright little English girl with appearance and qualities of mind far beyond her years: A Busy Yourn .- A boy in another town had two bunches of fire crackers given him on the Fourth which he crammed into his pocket, but noticing another lying idle on the sidewalk he crammed that in with the rest. It chanced that the vital spark was present in the soul of that idle cracker, and suddenly that boy became the busiest youth in all that town. There were about 230 distinct explosions in that pocket, and at each one he turned two double summersaults and shrieked with terror. When quiet was at length restored he clapped his hands upon the scorched and lacerated ruins of a once healthy abdomen, and groaned his disapprobation of the Pilgrim fathers for ever establishing a free country.

Yale's Triumph.

New York, July 18. A Springfield despatch says: Yale brilliantly redeemed herself and vindicated her new stroke by pulling over a three mile course in the remarkably fast time of six teen minutes and fifty-nine seconds. This is not unprecedented, for Amherst beat it twenty-six seconds in 1872, the Aggles by twelve and a half seconds in 1871, and Harvard by two seconds in 1872, but it has never been equaled by any other American college crew, and is forty-three and a half seconds better than the best of Yale's previous records. All the beauty of the road and surrounding towns was out in gaily flaunting colors. The college colors were freely displayed on every object. Occasionally a crowd of exuberant collegians, as they chanced to spy their favorite, would raise a deafening cheer, halling the grateful emblem with waying of handkerchiefs and pounding of sticks. Everybody was excited, everybody was bewildered, everybody was striving to Freach the course first. Springfield was wild with excitement during the afteroon and evening. At the stand on the West band the Harvard telegraph company had erected a black-board, on which the time and position of the boats were marked as they passed the half mile stations along the road. A band of music played during the interval between the races.

NEW YORK, July 18. A Halifax dispatch says: The Court to investigate the City of Washington disaster assembled yesterday, when Capt. Scott rendered his decision. The decision reviews briefly the testimony and exonerates all subordinate officers, and concludes:

book, I am of opinion that it was imprudent to ignore dead reckoning between the 26th and 27th of June, which showed the ship was considerably to the Northward. and this could not have been due to current. It must have been shown that compasses had a large amount of Easterly de viation. It was also imprudent to pass Grand Banks, Newfoundland, without try ing for soundings to correct reckoning, seeing that for six days no observations could be obtained, and that thick weather prevailed two days. Afther so passing the banks, it was highly imprudent to continue full speed without taking a cast of lead to show that the ship was off soundings, and particularly so when it ought to have been known by the master so much more iron and steel had been placed on board ship since compass corrections had been obtained. Under these circumstances, I am of the opinion that the masters' certificate of service held by William Robert Phillips, master, should be suspended for the space of one year from the Washington, and this certificats is hereby city.

Last evening the train on the Rensselaer and Saratoga railroad from Saratoga due here at 8:15 o'clock, ran off the track at Gilbert's car factory. The train was going very slowly at the time, but the bumping of the car wheels on the sleepers was by no means a pleasant sensation to the passengers, and many were much frightened, thinking that some dreadful accident was about to occur. Fortunately no one was greater than the morning but fell off stightly in the middle of the day, and closed strong with a sight advance excepting about to occur.
